“Music is why I dance.”

Music is at the heart of my work. It is why I started dancing, and it remains one of the strongest impulses behind the way I create. Often a piece begins with a track - with a rhythm, a sound, or an emotional response - but increasingly it also begins with something I need to say.

I am interested in growth and discovery, both within the subject of a work and within the dancers themselves. I want dancers to be emotionally present, to find themselves inside the movement, and to enjoy dancing it.

My work can move between identity, spirituality, memory, legacy, humor, and human relationships. Ultimately, I want an audience to feel something - to cry, laugh, recognize themselves, or simply leave wanting to see more.

Choreography for stage, museum, education, and interdisciplinary projects.

FEATURED WORK

FLIGHT

The Ailey School, Junior Division Summer Sizzler - New York City, 2025

Flight is a journey through anxiety, healing, reckoning, and return. Created for The Ailey School, the work is built around a layered soundscape by Zen Jefferson and draws on the emotional force of music, spoken word, and ensemble movement. The piece asks dancers to move beyond execution and into emotional presence - allowing rhythm, memory, and personal experience to live inside the choreography.

ECHO

Kunstmuseum Basel / Strength and Grace Benefit Gala - 2024

ECHO is a contemporary dance work originally created for Josef Helfenstein, Director of the Kunstmuseum Basel, on the occasion of his farewell. The piece reflects on the influence one leaves behind when departing - not as something static, but as something that continues to resonate, shift, and reappear over time, like an echo.

This version documents the second premiere of ECHO, presented at the Strength and Grace Benefit Gala in Basel.

FEATURED WORK

DEVOTED

DeSales University - 2024

Devoted reflects Armando Braswell’s diverse religious upbringing and his personal journey toward spiritual understanding. The work explores how different religious influences can coexist and shape identity over time. Rather than presenting a fixed belief system, Devoted frames spirituality as a personal and evolving process, where questioning, connection, and embodied experience play a central role.

Through shifts between vigorous movement, stillness, and moments of social connection, the work opens space to reflect on faith, meaning, community, and the sacred.
